"Collaboration, on the other hand, means cooperation in which the actors realise that they themselves are being changed in the process and even welcome this change." Mark Terkessidis in Kollaboration, suhrkamp, 2015.

For me, art is a practice for entering into dialogue about social, political and historical events as well as an interface where, through/with aesthetic forms, a different way of dealing with given conditions can be tested. As an "interface activist" I work on long-term questions that deal with concepts of democracy and sustainable futures. This includes work on social visions and models of participation (e.g. Cities Exhibition, Birzeit University Museum, Palestine 2012-13; This is Tomorrow, Osnabrück, 2015; Subcontracted Nations, Qattan Foundation, Palestine 2018, and Solidarity Crunch Zones, Villa Massimo, Rome, 2020-21), money (e.g. Left-over Penny Action/Restpfennigaktion, Germany, 1998-2002; Naples, Italy, 2008-2009; Madrid, 2010-2011, Liechtenstein, 2017,) and migration (including 'the border', 2020 Berlin; Cartographies (of) a Landscape, 2020 DA Gravenhorst; The Prehistory of Crisis II, Belfast and Dublin, 2009).

2018-2020	come and go   linger , participatory art project in Berlin-Wedding for the realization of a building at Nauener Platz. The artwork uses human cartography methods. These question the dominant paradigm of cartography, which states that maps are neutral images of reality. As a method, it analyzes maps as expressions and / or producers of social realities. Through critical questioning of maps and their genesis in general and in detail, knowledge is temporally and spatially situated, its relationship to power is examined and the fundamentals of thinking are called into question. The art project invites residents of Berlin-Wedding to actively collect data and facts as local experts in their everyday lives and to decide which ones will be implemented in a drawing in the location, which will be a neighbourhood café.
2019-ongoing	Human Cartographic processes at come and go   linger , in Berlin Wedding and the project district map of stories (together with urbanist Gloria Gaviria) at Karl Marx Avenue Berlin. come and go   Lingering worked in phase 1 with methods from critical cartography. An interactive role play developed out of the cartographic process of the district map of stories called We want to do it differently ! , which, as an argumentative role play, invites the protagonists of a neighborhood to act and argue from a different perspective.
